

Abstract

An amplifier arrangement includes a variable-gain signal amplifier. A control block is used to process a control signal in order to set the gain. A trimming unit acts on the control block such that signals which are produced by the control block can be trimmed relative to one another in order to set the gain of the signal amplifier.